Some Thoughts On Reconciliation

One of the greatest needs in our world today, is the idea of reconciliation. In order to establish and continue a healthy and proper relationship with others, we must be willing to admit our share of the responsibility of that relationship and be willing to unconditionally forgive when we have been wronged.

And let us realize that partial forgiveness is no forgiveness at all.

In fully admitting our share of the guilt, we may not restore any damage done, but it will reassure the other party that our motives are well-intended.

Our admission of guilt and our willingness to forgive, are the focal points around which true reconciliation revolves (Psalm 51; Ephesians 4:32; Colossians 3:12-13; cf. Matthew 6:14-15).
